Simeon Care for the Elderly is a registered charity established in 1984 and a member of the Association of Camphill Communities. We provide a home and community with care and support to 23 older people in the last phase of life who can no longer live independently in their own home due to mental or physical impairments. Our mission is to support older people to live an active, meaningful and purposeful life in a community of care. Our work is regulated by the Scottish Care Inspectorate and our permanent employed workforce is regulated by the Scottish Social Services Council (SSSC).

Simeon and Camphill have a long established history of creating community and enriching the lives of its beneficiaries through the involvement of international and local volunteers. The international volunteers live in the community alongside the old people. They provide direct support, companionship, and activities to help our residents to live an active, meaningful and purposeful life as best as they are able. Their volunteer services are above and beyond the core work carried out by the permanent employed workforce. All volunteers are supervised by professional staff and receive appropriate training to enable them to carry out their activities safely and effectively.
